Tips for Social Studies Section

Many students find the social studies section to be one of the easier exams on the GED.

This test consists of Civics and Government (50%), United States history (20%), Economics (15%), and Geography and the World (15%).

For the Civics and Government section, you will be expected to know how our government is structured and the common themes throughout.

In the United States History section, you will not be expected to memorize specific dates, but you should be familiar with time periods.

You should refresh your memory on the Louisiana Purchase, the Industrial Revolution, the Civil War, and NATO.

You should prepare for the GED economics questions by answering plenty of sample questions pertaining to graphs and analyzing information.
