Beat the Bomb-Green Team

5 Epic Tips for Middle Schoolers, whether you're a newbie or a seasoned pro!

1. Don't get into drama. There's going to be a lot of it. It's not worth wasting your time and energy on things that won't matter the next day.
2. Don't be cruel. Hurting other people won't make you feel any better about yourself. And trust me, it will only make the other person feel worse about themselves.
3. Try harder in the classes you hate. Chances are, you have at least one class you'll hate. Try harder in that class, or those classes, and you're less likely to fail.
4. Stick with the people you trust, and those who make you feel better about yourself. If you hang out with people who hurt you for no good reason, you'll feel worse about yourself. Hang with the people who boost your self-esteem instead of crushing it.
5. You don't need to be popular. People try so hard to be popular, but in all honesty, going into high school, how popular you were in middle school doesn't matter. Frankly, it doesn't matter in middle school either. No one cares if you're popular, they care if you're nice. So just be nice, and be yourself.

Mistakes to Avoid in Choosing a College

1. Rushing the process- Finding the right college takes time and effort, not to mention research and an often-lengthy application process.
2. Being a follower- Following a boyfriend, girlfriend, or best friend to the college of their choice may seem like a promising idea at the time, but this is one of the most pivotal points in your life, too. If your relationships are strong, they will outlast time and distance anyway.
3. The legacy lure- Only considering colleges your parents, siblings, or other family members went to in order to follow them may not be in your best interest. It's always best to explore your options and find the right fit for our personality.
4. The temptation to party- So, it's a great party school but is it a great learning environment? While you may be itching to get out on your own and party like a rock star, that's really not what college is about. When choosing a college, it's understandable to want a campus with a healthy social atmosphere. Just be sure that it's a setting that's conducive to the real goal at hand: learning.
5. Location, location, location- Whether you're a homebody who wants to stay close or an escape artist who wants to get as far from home as possible, the location should be a factor in choosing a college.

7. Not visiting- It's always better to visit and experience the college for yourself. If visiting colleges and universities is not something you have the budget to do, try checking out the campus environment via social media accounts from students spending time on campus.
